THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDENS, KEW

The British Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew was founded in 1759 and declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 2003. Spanning over three hundred acres in South West London, the gardens are renowned for their royal heritage, historic listed buildings, iconic glasshouses and vast range of rare and beautiful plants.

Throughout the past 250 years, the organisation has amassed a spectacularly diverse collection of over 30,000 living plants, millions of preserved specimens and thousands of original botanical illustrations and drawings.

Kew's second garden in West Sussex, England, is home to the Millennium Seed Bank. As the world's largest plant conservation programme, the Millennium Seed Bank houses almost two million seeds with the aim of saving and preserving a number of species from extinction.

A world famous centre of excellence for both horticultural research and conservation, the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew has earned its reputation as a global resource on the science and history of plants.

Now, renowned homeware company Lubkowski Saunders & Associates Ltd brings its design expertise and quality craftsmanship to new and exclusively developed Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew-licensed collections.

Inspired by Kew's plants and flowers, complementary designs across glass drinkware, serveware and mouthblown accessories are individually decorated with assorted botanical illustrations. Every product or assorted set is gift boxed in packaging printed with its botanical décor and stamped with the iconic Kew Gardens roundel logo.

The Garden to Table collection is inspired by a garden of edible herbs and flowers. Tall, delicate stems encircle the classic designs, each identified by its original Latin name. Scented herbs and flowers create aromatic infusions for tea, tonics and cocktails. Aromatic herbs are traditionally used to season meats, vegetables and sauces.
